Passives Cross-Linguistically
Theoretical and Experimental Approaches

Edited by Kleantes K. Grohmann,
University of Cyprus,
Akemi Matsuya, Takachiho
University, and Eva-Maria
Remberger, University of Vienna

The volume Passives Cross-Linguistically provides analyses of passive constructions across different languages and populations from the interface perspectives between syntax, semantics, and pragmatics. In addition to the theoretical contributions, some experimental works are presented, which explore passives from psycholinguistic perspectives.

READERSHIP: All interested in modern approaches to passive constructions in both theoretical and empirical detail from different languages as well as psycholinguistic applications to language processing, acquisition, and pathology.

Ten lectures on field semantics and semantic typology

Jürgen Bohnemeyer,
University at Buffalo

These lectures provide one of the first comprehensive introductions to semantic typology, the study of crosslinguistic variation in how languages represent reality. In addition, they survey research methods for field semantics, the study of linguistic meaning under fieldwork conditions.

READERSHIP: These lectures are directed at students and scholars in linguistics and neighboring disciplines with an interest in linguistic meaning especially as it intersects with culture and nonverbal cognition.

The Western Karaim Torah

A Critical Edition of a Manuscript from 1720

Michał Németh, Jagiellonian University in Kraków

This volume offers the critical edition and an English translation of the oldest translation of the Pentateuch into Western Karaim copied in 1720 by Simcha ben Chananel (died 1723). The manuscript was compared against several other Karaim translations of the Torah as well as with the standard text of the Hebrew Bible. The author provides a description of the manuscript's language and an outline of the history of Western Karaim translations of the Torah to better understand the its philological and historical background.

READERSHIP: All interested in the history of Turkic (especially Kipchak-Turkic) languages and anyone concerned with the Karaim translation techniques of Hebrew religious texts.

Experiential Verbs in Homeric Greek

A Constructional Approach

Silvia Luraghi, University of Pavia

In Experiential Verbs in Homeric Greek: A Constructional Approach Silvia Luraghi offers a comprehensive account of construction variation with two-place verbs belonging to different sub-domains of experience (including bodily sensation, perception, cognition, emotion and volitionality) in the Homeric language. Traditionally, variation is ascribed to the independent meaning of cases that mark the second argument, and explanations have focused on properties of the latter. By taking a constructional approach, the author shows that construction variation also brings about differences in the conceptualization of the subject/experiencer by pointing to different degrees of control and awareness. Variation is then shown to reflect the embodied construal of experience along with the social dimension of emotions.

READERSHIP: All interested in Ancient Greek language and linguistics, Indo-European linguistics, language typology, semantics, and in the relation between language and cognition.

The Language of the Old-Okinawan Omoro Sōshi

Reference Grammar, with Textual Selections

Leon A. Serafim and Rumiko Shinzato, Georgia Institute of Technology

The Omoro Sōshi (1531–1623) is an indispensable resource for historical linguistic comparison of Old Okinawan with other Ryukyuan languages and Old Japanese. Leon A Serafim and Rumiko Shinzato offer a reference grammar, including detailed phonological analyses, of the otherwise opaque and dense poetic/religious language of the Omoro Sōshi. Meshing Western linguistic insight with existing literary/linguistic work in Ryukyuan studies, and incorporating their own research on Modern Okinawan, the authors offer a grammar and phonology of the Omoro language, with selected (excerpts of) songs grammatically analyzed, phonologically reconstructed, translated, and annotated.

READERSHIP: Students of Japanese/Ryukyuan languages, linguistics, and literature, or interested in studying the Omoro Sōshi and Old Okinawan from the standpoint of history, religion, or culture; research libraries catering to them.

BIBLIOGRAPHIE LINGUISTIQUE 2019 ET COMPLEMENT DES ANNÉES PRÉCÉDENTES

Linguistic Bibliography for the Year 2019 / Bibliographie Linguistique de l'année 2019 and Supplement for Previous Years / et complement des années précédentes

Edited by Anne Aarssen, René Genis and Eline van der Veken

The Linguistic Bibliography / Bibliographie Linguistique is the annual bibliography of theoretical linguistics published by the Permanent International Committee of Linguists under the auspices of the International Council of Philosophy and Humanistic Studies of UNESCO. With a tradition of over sixty-five years, the Linguistic Bibliography is by far the most comprehensive bibliographic reference work in the field. It covers all disciplines of theoretical linguistics, both general and language specific, from all geographical areas, including endangered and extinct languages with particular attention to lesser-known Indo-European and non-Indo-European languages. Up-to-date information is guaranteed by the collaboration of some forty-five contributing specialists from all over the world. With over 20,000 titles arranged according to a subject and language classification, the Linguistic Bibliography is a standard reference work for every scholar of language and linguistics. This volume has been brought up-to-date and contains extensive indexes of names, languages, and subjects.

READERSHIP: All interested in linguistics.

A Descriptive and Comparative Grammar of Western Old Japanese (2 vols.)

Revised, Updated and Enlarged Second Edition

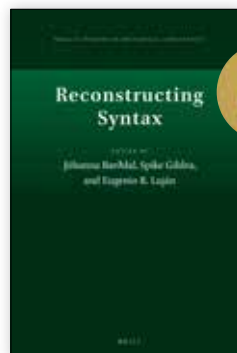

Alexander Vovin

This is the revised, updated and enlarged second edition of the first detailed descriptive grammar in English (indeed, in any language other than Japanese and more complete than even any grammar in Japanese) dedicated to the Western Old Japanese, which was spoken in the Kansai region of Japan during the seventh and eighth centuries. The grammar is divided into two volumes, with the first volume dealing with sources, script, phonology, lexicon, nominals and adjectives. The second volume focuses on verbs, adverbs, particles, conjunctions and interjections. In addition to descriptive data, the grammar also includes comparisons between Western Old Japanese and Eastern Old Japanese and Ryukyuan, occasionally with a critical analysis of various external parallels.

READERSHIP: All those interested in Japanese studies and (historical) linguistics.

The Things of Others
Ethnographies, Histories, and Other Artefacts

Olívia Maria Gomes da Cunha

Languages of Islam and Christianity in Post-Soviet Russia

Gulnaz Sibgatullina,
 University of Amsterdam

Schmidt's is a story that takes account of the pathological mechanisms of colonialism. Duin's annotated translation of Lodewijk Schmidt's ethnographic accounts forces us to reflect upon the catastrophe that is ethnocide and deforestation of the Eastern Guiana Highlands in Amazonia.

The Things of Others: Ethnographies, Histories, and Other Artefacts deals with the things mainly, but not only, mobilized by anthropologists in order to produce knowledge about the African American, the Afro-Brazilian and the Afro-Cuban during the 1930s.

This book examines how Muslims and Christians in Russia use religious variants of the Russian and Tatar languages to sustain, challenge and subvert relations of power.

READERSHIP: All interested in the pathological mechanisms of colonialism, and anyone concerned with African Diaspora Communities and Indigenous Peoples in Amazonia.

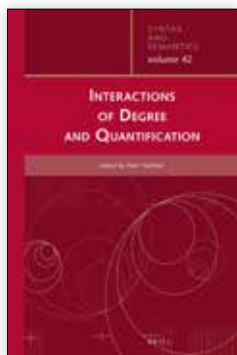

READERSHIP: Anthropologists, historians, social scientists, archivists, librarians, practitioners of STS, and all interested in the history of the modernist anthropology.

READERSHIP: All interested in Muslim-Christian relations in Russia, as well as sociolinguists concerned with functions of religious languages and transformations of Russian and Tatar in the post-Soviet period.

Something out of Nothing

The Semantics and Pragmatics of Implicit Quantification

Ariel Cohen, Ben-Gurion
University of the Negev

In this book, Ariel Cohen makes the novel proposal that an implicit quantifier isn't simply an empty category, but is generated by well-defined reinterpretation mechanisms. He demonstrates how this theory naturally accounts for puzzling properties of implicit quantification.

READERSHIP: Researchers and advanced graduate students who are interested in semantics, pragmatics, or philosophy of language.
