Russian Cognitive Neuroscience

Historical and Cultural Context

Chris Forsythe, Sandia National Laboratories, Albuquerque

This volume brings together an unprecedented compilation of papers from esteemed Russian psychophysiologicals, cognitive scientists, and neuroscientists. The contributors explain the disciplinary trajectories and theoretical foundations inspiring their experimental research, providing important intellectual contexts. Commentaries by editors Chris Forsythe and Gabriel Radvansky discuss the relationships between Russian, European, and American developments in cognitive science and neuroscience. This volume provides a detailed exposition of the distinctively Russian advances in neuropsychology and cognitive science from the late nineteenth century to the present.

READERSHIP: Scholars interested in diverse theoretical approaches to brain science and cognitive science, and anyone studying scientific developments in Russia.

La mesure de l'être
Le problème de la quantification des formes au Moyen Âge (ca. 1250-1370)
Sylvain Roudaut,
Stockholm University

The aim of this book is to analyze the problem of the intensity of forms in the late Middle Ages and to show how this debate eventually gave rise to a new metaphysical project in the 14th century: the project of quantifying the different types of perfections existing in the universe – that is the project of “measuring being”.

Understanding the Evolving Meaning of Reason in David Novak's Natural Law Theory

Jonathan L. Milevsky, Tanenbaum Community
Hebrew Academy of Toronto

How can one Jewish thinker's natural law theory explain morality, divine commandments, and human ordinances; and how do we assess the consistency of that theory when it is mentioned in connection with such diverse areas? The answer lies in the changing meaning of reason in Novak's writings.

READERSHIP: My book will be relevant to academics, including graduate students and post-graduates interested in modern Jewish thought. In addition, this book would be of interest to members of Jewish-Christian dialogue groups and motivated readers intrigued by the philosophy of Judaism.

Das Maß des Menschen

Platons Antwort an Protagoras im 'Theaitetos' und im 'Protagoras'

Edwin J. de Sterke, University of Applied Sciences and Arts FHNW, Switzerland

Protagoras claims to be able to educate the young. Why not? If «Man is Measure of Everything», anybody can make everybody 'better'... To Plato, this doesn't add up. What's lacking? What is the measure of Man, if Man be measure?

READERSHIP: Students and specialists in Ancient Philosophy and the history of pedagogical and political thought. Due to the fundamental questions it poses, the book is also relevant for modern discussions in these fields.

The Lvov-Warsaw School and Contemporary Philosophy of Language

Edited by Piotr Stalmaszczyk and Mieszko Tałasiewicz

The Lvov-Warsaw School and Contemporary Philosophy of Language

Edited by Piotr Stalmaszczyk, University of Lodz, and Mieszko Tałasiewicz, University of Warsaw

This book highlights the legacy of the Lvov-Warsaw School in broadly understood contemporary philosophy of language. Fundamental methodological issues, important topics in syntax, semantics and pragmatics (such as modern Categorical Grammar, theories of truth, game-theoretical semantics, and argumentation theory) are tracked down to their origins in the Lvov-Warsaw School, and – the other way round – modern renderings of the ideas expressed by Kazimierz Ajdukiewicz, Tadeusz Kotarbiński, Stanisław Leśniewski, Jan Łukasiewicz, Alfred Tarski, Kazimierz Twardowski, and other members of the School are presented. Among contributors there are philosophers, logicians, formal linguists and other specialists from France, Italy, Poland, and Spain.

READERSHIP: Specialists in subject matter (philosophical methodology, theories of truth, Categorical Grammar, philosophy/linguistics interface, argumentation theory, etc.), historians of the Lvov-Warsaw School, specialists in analytic philosophy, and post-graduate students interested in historical inspirations behind current debates in philosophy in general, and especially philosophy of language.

Sextus, Montaigne, Hume: Pyrrhonizers

Brian C. Ribeiro, University of Tennessee at Chattanooga

This work invites us to view the Pyrrhonist tradition as involving all those who share a commitment to the activity of Pyrrhonizing and develops fresh, provocative readings of Sextus, Montaigne, and Hume as radical Pyrrhonizing skeptics: From the aspirationalism of Sextan Pyrrhonism, to Montaigne's skeptical fideism and his unusual approach to the writing process, to the vexing interpretive issues surrounding Hume's skepticism, each figure offers us new insights into what it can mean to Pyrrhonize.

Non-Evidentialist Epistemology

Edited by Luca Moretti, University of Aberdeen, and Nikolaj Jang Lee Linding Pedersen, Underwood International College, Yonsei University

Is it possible for belief or acceptance to be epistemically justified or rational without evidence? Non-evidentialism says, "Yes". This original edited collection explores the tenability of non-evidentialism as a response to epistemological scepticism and examines potential applications within social psychology, psychiatry, and mathematics.

READERSHIP: Specialists, post-graduate students and advanced undergraduates who have a background in analytic epistemology and would like to go deeper into recent discussion on non-evidentialist epistemology.

Time's Causal Power
Proclus and the Natural Theology of Time

Antonio Vargas, Hebrew
University of Jerusalem

In Time's Causal Power, Antonio Vargas explains how Proclus (412-485 C.E.) developed the unique theory that time is a cause and a god, the world's first unmoved mover by addressing Aristotle's criticisms of Plato's claim that time is a change.

Models of Desire in Graeco-Arabic Philosophy
From Plotinus to Ibn Tufayl

Bethany Somma, LMU Munich

This study argues that late ancient Greek and medieval Islamic philosophers interpret human desire along two frameworks in reaction to Aristotle's philosophy, unfolding from the philosophy of Plotinus through the Graeco-Arabic translation movement in 8th-10th century Baghdad to 12th century al-Andalus with the philosophy of Ibn Bāğğa and Ibn Tufayl.

READERSHIP: All interested in Philosophy of the Islamic world, ancient Greek philosophy, late ancient philosophy, and medieval philosophy, and anyone interested in perspectives on the role of desire in ethics and anthropology.

Altruism or the Other as the Essence of Existence

A Philosophical Passage to Being Altruistic

Iraklis (Hercules) Ioannidis, Dartford Grammar School, UK

Charting new routes for film ethics, Transformational Ethics of Film develops a critical account of the ethics of personal transformation at work within the 'film as philosophy' debate.

The authors of The Bounds of Myth present in their articles an account of the importance of myth as a valid form of thought and its relation to other forms of discourse such as religion or literature.

Ioannidis relies on existential and feminist psychoanalysis to provide a radical and intertextual philosophical analysis of altruism. Following Nietzsche, he traces altruism to the phenomenon of giving one's word.

READERSHIP: Both scholars and students of film theory, aesthetics, and visual culture studies – particularly those interested in philosophical and/or ethical aspects of film and film spectatorship.

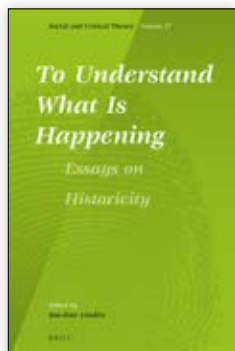

READERSHIP: All interested in myth-criticism and interpretation of myths within the history of culture.

READERSHIP: All interested in altruism, history of moral philosophy, ethics, phenomenology, existential and feminist psychoanalysis, intersubjectivity, empathy, and anyone interested in Heraclitus, Aristotle, Plato, logos, Peirce and Kafka.

Suffering Time

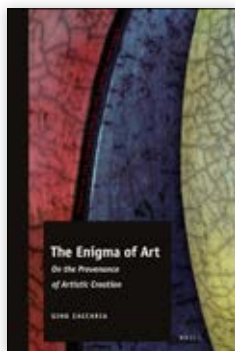

Philosophical, Kabbalistic, and Hasidic Reflections on Temporality

Elliot R. Wolfson,
University of California

No one theory of time is pursued in the essays of this volume, but a major theme that threads them together is Wolfson's signature idea of the timeserve as a linear circularity or a circular linearity, expressions that are meant to avoid the conventional split between the two temporal modalities of the line and the circle.

Like an Animal

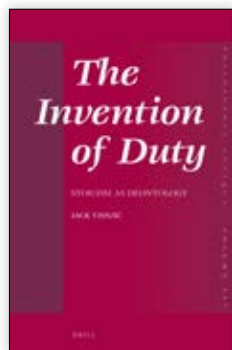

Critical Animal Studies Approaches to Borders, Displacement, and Othering

Natalie Khazaal, Georgia Institute of Technology (USA), and Núria Almiron, Universitat Pompeu Fabra (Spain)

The contributors of Like an Animal challenge most fundamental concepts in the fields of racism, dehumanization, borders, displacement, and refugees that rest on the assumption of humanism. They show how we can bend the arc of the moral universe toward justice at the border. The goal of this interdisciplinary collection is twofold. First, to invite border/migration studies to consider a broader social justice perspective that includes nonhuman animals. Second, to start a discussion if nonhumans maybe refugees of a kind and how humans can address nonhumans' interests and needs from the perspective of addressing refugee issues.

READERSHIP: All interested in integrated approaches to social justice, human rights, animal rights, animal ethics, communication for peace, ecology and environmental activism, displacement, migration, borders, and international relations.
